

THE INDIVIDUAL IN HISTORY

2009

MARYLAND

HISTORY DAY

Welcome to Maryland History Day 2009!

The Maryland Humanities Council welcomes you to Maryland History Day 2009! You are part of a growing statewide movement in which over 16,000 students statewide have made history come alive through your independent research and creativity.

By taking part in History Day, you are involved in something much larger than today's contest. As your generation of Marylanders comes of age, you will be called upon to use the very skills that have helped you develop the projects that you are presenting today. Voting, writing a letter to the editor of your local newspaper, participating in a political campaign, or promoting a cause that you are passionate about – all require the very research, writing, and critical thinking skills that History Day celebrates.

Congratulations to each of you for reaching this level of achievement. We look forward to having many of you represent Maryland at the National History Day competition and hope that all of you will continue to showcase your research in your communities. Thank you for serving as ambassadors for the Maryland Humanities Council and history research throughout the state of Maryland.

Phoebe Stein Davis
Executive Director

What Is The Maryland Humanities Council?

The Maryland Humanities Council (MHC) is a private, educational, nonprofit organization governed by a volunteer Board of Directors. The Maryland Humanities Council stimulates and promotes informed dialogue and civic engagement on issues critical to Marylanders. By using the resources of the Humanities—such as history, literature, philosophy, art history, jurisprudence, and ethics—MHC stimulates informed conversations that explore ourselves, our society, and continuing critical issues in Maryland communities.
